

Reeds Loop

The Reeds Loop is a 1.1-mile trail with stream access and excellent birding opportunities. Its bouldery terrain makes it a fun and engaging hike for adventurous kids and anyone who enjoys a bit of rock scrambling.

The Fly Rod Crosby Trails

Explore a series of three loop hikes that offer access to the landscape, history, and recreational opportunities of the High Peaks.

Named for Cornelia “Fly Rod” Crosby, these trails span the region she loved, with trailheads at three locations.

The Fly Rod Crosby Trails include:

- Sandy River Rangeley Lakes Railroad Loop in Phillips
- Reeds Loop in Madrid
- Saddleback Spur in Dallas Plantation

Is this section of trail on public land?

No. This trail is on land that is privately owned. The landowner has granted permission for passage through their land. Stay on the designated trail and practice carry-in carry-out ethics.

Become a Rec Ranger

Built by volunteers, the Reeds Loop is cared for by volunteer Rec Rangers who steward and maintain it. You can adopt a section or join a trail work day to help keep this beautiful trail thriving.

Directions

From Route 4, follow Reed Mills Road for about 4 miles. On the left, you'll see a grassy pull-off area for parking. While there's no parking sign, a kiosk marking the trailhead is located at the edge of this grassy area, visible across the field.

High Peaks Alliance

Our mission is to ensure and enhance public access and opportunities for recreation in the High Peaks region. Learn more:

HighPeaksAlliance.org

Reeds Loop

Explore a section of the Fly Rod Crosby Trail in the heart of Maine's High Peaks Region.

HighPeaksAlliance.org

Reeds Mill Loop

Reeds Mill Loop .82 Miles

Orbeton Stream

Railroad Rd.

Reeds Mill Rd.

0 100 200 300 400 500 Feet